ASX Announcement

Resignation of Chairman

3D Oil Limited (ASX: TDOCA) advises that its chairman, Ian Gorman, has resigned from the board as both chairman and non-executive director effective September 21 2007 due to ill health.

As a result of impending medical treatment and the projected long recovery time, Mr Gorman feels that he will not be able to properly discharge his duties as chairman and director.

“Given the importance of this period to the future growth of 3D Oil and the need to have a fully active board during a key growth phase, I have made the decision to step down from my roles,” Mr Gorman said.

“I wish everyone at 3D Oil every success and I will continue to follow the company with interest”.

Commenting on the departure, 3D Oil’s Managing Director, Noel Newell said, “With over 25 years of international oil and gas experience, Ian Gorman has been an invaluable asset and an outstanding chairman. We wish him a speedy recovery and all the best with his future endeavours.”

3D Oil is currently in discussions with suitable candidates for a replacement for the non-executive Chairman. Pending that appointment, Campbell Horsfall will act as non-executive Chairman.
